Access Appoints New Head of US Office with Previous Head of UK Office

Access Capital Advisers CEO, Alexander Austin, announced today that Andrew Cunanan will be re-joining Access Capital Advisers as a Partner. Andrew will replace Thomas Majewski as head of the Access Capital Advisers' New York office.

Mr Austin said "It is particularly pleasing to welcome back someone who has been very involved in the growth of the Access Capital Advisers business over the past decade. Andrew brings expertise across infrastructure, private equity and property transactions which will be valuable in sourcing deals for clients in the United States across the alternatives spectrum."

Andrew joined Access in January 2001 as an Analyst after graduating from the ANU with honours degrees in both Economics and Actuarial Studies. His last position with the firm was as head of the firm's London office, which he founded in 2007. Before that, Andrew worked for Access in Europe and Australia. He left the firm in December 2009 to travel and live and work in Asia.

Andrew combines a strong analytical background with commercial skills developed in his various roles with Access. He specialises in the sourcing, due diligence and execution of direct equity investments in infrastructure/private equity and the asset management and governance of direct investments. He has worked on a wide range of transactions, including in recent years Angel Trains, Thames Water, Moto Hospitality and Evergreen Forests. He has served as a Director on the Boards of Arqiva, Southern Water and Angel Trains.

Andrew holds honours degrees in Economics and Actuarial Studies from the ANU, is a Fellow of the Institute of Actuaries of Australia, a Chartered Financial Analyst and Chartered Alternative Investment Analyst.
